Ally to Assume Combat Role Nixon Reports Success in Cambodian Sweep

There is no mention in Mr. Nixon's report of COSVN, the enemy's central headquarters in Cambodia that the President announced on April 30 was one of the targets in the border crossing.

Such a man is Mr. Joseph Alsop, a distinguished writer and an authority on political-military affairs. It is therefore a privilege to be able to republish in these columns, the articles in whole and part, that appeared in The Washington Post.

Soviet's Middle East MASTER PLAN

An Israeli Delegation is currently in Washington, to discover just what President Nixon meant, when he promised a regular flow of replacement aircraft for Israel to Prime Minister Golda Meir.

What the Israelis will mainly discover — what they have perhaps discovered already — is the quagmire of American policy-making that the dreadful Middle Eastern crisis has produced.

DEADLY REALISM

Before the Six-Day War, the Egyptians had 350 tanks and the Syrians had 350. Today, the Soviets have provided Egypt with 1,600 tanks, and the Syrians with 1,000.

The contrast in planes is even more startling. The Egyptian air force has increased from 100 planes in 1967 to 600 today, including 170 MIG-21s and 150 Sukhoi bombers in the supersonic category.

The 100 MIG-21s of the most advanced model, which the Soviet pilots are flying in Egypt, are additional to the figures given above for the Egyptian air force.

The Soviet pilots and SAM-3s have already put President Nasser's war of attrition back into high gear. How serious this is may be hard for North Americans to understand.

BRAZEN SOVIET PLOT

No one in his senses can read the foregoing figures without reaching a grim conclusion. The Soviet arms shipments were obviously planned, from the first, to give the Arab client-states enough sheer weight of metal to crush Israel.

In contrast, the Israelis will be offered Phantom and Skyhawk planes on a strict "replacement" basis, to be provided only when necessary to maintain their tiny existing stock of supersonic Phantoms and Mirages, plus the Skyhawks they have.

ANOTHER MUNDANE

In these diplomatic exercises, it is far made to deal with Israel as the Brno deal with the wretched Czechoslovaks before and after Munich in 1938.

When this sort of thing happens, there is always the Munich-time temptation — the temptation to urge the small and threatened nation to sacri-

Such a man is Mr. Joseph Alsop, a distinguished writer and an authority on political-military affairs. It is therefore a privilege to be able to republish in these columns, the articles in whole and part, that appeared in The Washington Post.

TRUTHS WE FACE

The truth is that the recent talk about the Soviet role in Egypt between Secretary of State Rogers and Soviet Ambassador Anatoli Dobrynin, was about on a par with the famous Kennedy-Gromyko conversation of 1962.

Meanwhile, the central danger is the quagmire in the U.S. government, on which Israel must depend for Israel's simple survival. In certain quarters in the Defense Department, although not in the uniformed armed services, hostility to Israel comes close to being blatant.

In most of the State Department, Mr. Mickey's hope that "something will turn up," is the characteristic note. Even in the official interpretations of Soviet intentions in the Middle East, wishfulness is all too frequent.

The fact is that nothing will be gained, for the long pull, by the kind of American fudging that seems to be in prospect. Trouble for U.S. oil concession-holders in the Arab countries will probably be avoided for the time being — but only for the time being.

REALITY OF TWO POLICIES

There are in reality only two rational policies to adopt in this Middle Eastern crisis. One policy is based on "reasons of state," which the French have announced.

Thus Foreign Secretary Michael Stewart some time ago told Mrs. Meir, straight out, that Britain could not sell Israel new tanks, but must still sell tanks to Libya, because of the British oil interest in Libya.

As to the other rational policy, it is for the U.S. to bet its bottom dollar on the only remaining American assets in the Middle East, which are the shining courage and superb skill of the Israelis. That will mean trouble with the "moderate" Arabs, of course. But if Israel is crushed by Egypt and Syria, with active Soviet help, both the "moderate" Arabs and the Western oil concessions will vanish, almost overnight.

IN FREE WORLD'S INTEREST

Backing Israel means far more than a meager promised flow of replacement aircraft. Backing Israel means, for instance, providing Israel with American supersonic jets in really substantial numbers, not just to replace lost Phantoms, but to replace the shabby obsolete Voughts, Mysteres and Jaguars that make up the bulk of the Israeli air force.

Backing Israel in this manner will have a supreme advantage, too. It will recalculate the risks of the Middle East. And even those risks are recalculated soon, a most terrible disaster is certain in the end.

for four months, while it would take the enemy about eight months to replace more than 15 million rounds of ammunition that Americans captured.

White House officials said today that the capture of COSVN was considered a possible bonus but not a goal of the invasion. He said that at one point during the operation COSVN communications were disrupted for four days.

White House sources said that evidence suggested that the North Vietnamese were reviewing their policy on the war. They said that Communist ambassadors had been called home during the last 60 days and that the North Vietnamese parliament had been called into session — a sign that an intensive discussion was taking place.

But one official said that he expected the North Vietnamese and Viet Cong to make a move in Cambodia or South Vietnam during July or August to show that they still had substantial strength.

The U.S. Command reported that 338 Americans were killed and 1,529 wounded in the operations in Cambodia. South Vietnamese losses were listed as 874 men killed and 3,779 wounded.

He said the South Vietnamese Navy now has 39,611 men, making it the ninth largest in the world. At the end of December it will have 650 patrol craft.

American B-52 bombers and jet fighter-bombers pounded areas near Phnom Penh in what sources said would be a continuing drive to prevent the North Vietnamese and Viet Cong from rebuilding supply areas.

The sources said 5,000 South Vietnamese troops also had pulled out of Cambodia, but 34,000 government soldiers still remained across the border.

South Vietnamese officials announced that the government had opened an airstrip at Weak Luong, a ferry crossing and highway point on the Mekong River about 35 miles southeast of Phnom Penh.

Mr. Nasser also noted that Arab-Soviet friendship has become a constant factor and balanced aid and support from the U.S.S.R. and the socialist states against the way "imperialism supplied the child with the most up-to-date Arab struggles in Jordan and Saudi Arabia as well as the U.S. peace initiative."

Less of the initiative has been revealed here than in the West. Recent Soviet press attacks on U.S. "maneuvers" have sounded as though they were written before details of the initiative reached here.

Excercises

SAN CLEMENS, 30—Partial text Nixon's report on dian operation:

Together with the Vietnamese, the armed forces of the United States have just completed successfully the destruction of enemy base areas along the Cambodian-South Vietnam frontier.

Will save American and allied lives in the future. Will assure that the withdrawal of American troops from South Vietnam can proceed on schedule.

No Reasonable Option It is vital to understand at the outset that Hanoi left the United States no reasonable option but to move militarily against the Cambodian base areas.

Proposals Offered Since January of 1969, we have taken steps on all fronts to move toward peace. Along with the government of South Vietnam, we have put forward a number of concrete and reasonable proposals to promote genuine negotiations.

These proposals are designed to secure the removal of all foreign military forces from South Vietnam and to establish conditions in which all political forces can compete freely for the "future" of their country.

Rapid Change

We thus faced a rapidly changing military situation from that which existed on April 30. The possibility of a grave new threat to our troops in South Vietnam was rapidly becoming an actuality.

Gestures Ignored

But Hanoi has ignored our unilateral gestures and rejected every offer of serious negotiations. Instead it has insisted that—as a precondition to talks—we pledge unconditionally to withdraw all American forces from South Vietnam, and to overthrow the elected government.

These proposals are not a basis for negotiations; they are a demand for surrender. For the United States to accept these conditions would make the negotiations meaningless.

Looking at American policy in Vietnam these 17 months, this administration—in the generosity of its negotiating offers, in the limitations on its military actions, and in the consistency of its troop withdrawals—has written a record of restraint.

Decision in Moscow

The latest American proposals for peace in the Middle East have met with a generally unenthusiastic reception from the parties directly concerned.

This much is apparent, however: Mr. Rogers' latest venture into peace-making did not receive (except from the Palestinian guerrillas) the abrupt rejection accorded its predecessor.

The critical point at this stage is Moscow, where President Nasser is meeting with the Soviet leaders.

It is plain enough that Messrs. Rogers, Brezhnev and Nasser cannot, by fiat, bring peace to the Mideast.

Another complete frustration of peace efforts would give an enormous spur to the most intransigent elements on both sides of the quarrel, and might lead to irreversible acts and attitudes. The degree of border fighting and terrorism has reached new heights lately; further escalation may push the war beyond the point of no return.

It is to be hoped that in Moscow a more rational approach may win out. The anarchy that is promised by the increasing role of the guerrilla groups throughout the region benefits no nation.

Avoiding a Trade War

The collapse of negotiations between the United States and Japan over textile exports jeopardizes political and economic relations between the two countries and raises acute danger of a worldwide wave of protectionism.

Following the breakdown of the talks, Secretary of Commerce Maurice Stans immediately announced the administration's "reluctant" support of mandatory quotas on textiles.

The administration might well be "reluctant" to adopt mandatory quotas. For one thing, they put the United States in violation of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade.

Obviously hoping to limit the damage done by its decision to back the Mills bill, the White House is opposing that part of the measure which would establish mandatory quotas on shoes.

Mr. Nixon ought to have made the same decision on textiles. Before invoking escape-clause proceedings on shoes, the administration had prepared a careful report on the shoe industry and imports.

What is clear, however, is that the textile industry has plenty of political muscle. Its success in gaining quotas will provide a strong incentive to other industries to use their political power to obtain protection for themselves.

To prevent the existing situation from escalating into a trade war, the administration must prove its opposition, which it says it holds "in principle" to mandatory quotas.

The Japanese have been far from blameless in this trade dispute. They enforce quotas of their own against many products in violation of GATT rules, as well as other highly restrictive curbs on foreign trade and investment.

The Status of Soviet Jews

By C. L. Sulzberger

MOSCOW.—If the position of Soviet Jews is not so bad as the West imagines, it is surely not so good as the regime pretends.

Parts of the U.S.S.R. are traditionally anti-Semitic—above all in western Russia, the Ukraine, Byelorussia and the Baltic states.

However, unlike other "nationals"—Ukrainians or Armenians or Ossetians—the Jews don't have their own Soviet republic.

Few Jews hold high army or diplomatic positions and none are left in the party leadership.

Open anti-Semitism is unusual. Moscow's synagogue is not guarded yet no vandalism occurs.

All religions are disadvantaged but the Jewish religion most. There are only 63 Soviet synagogues and no seminary so rabbis aren't being replaced.

The Charm That Failed

By R.W. Apple Jr.

WASHINGTON.—In his memoirs, Pierre Salinger tells about an old man who met him at the airport when he returned to California in 1964 to run for the Senate.

The man, a stranger, pressed a Kennedy half-dollar into his hand and said "If you carry it with you all the time you can't lose."

Former aides and friends of President Kennedy and his brother, Sen. Robert F. Kennedy, have been suffering repeated setbacks in their own campaigns.

The first to fail this year was the former astronaut, John E. Glenn Jr., who lost the Democratic senatorial nomination in Ohio to a political unknown, Howard M. Metzbaum, by 12,000 votes—even though everyone knew Glenn's name at the beginning of the campaign and most of the voters respected him.

Then came Theodore C. Sorensen, the man responsible for much of President Kennedy's best-known prose ("ask not what you can do for your country...").

And Sargent Shriver, a Kennedy brother-in-law, has accepted an

Moscow would really like to assimilate Jews as "nationals" of the 16 republics but it doesn't want to push this idea too fast for fear of an outcry abroad if the Jewish minority statistically seemed to disappear.

Thus the Jews, who have never felt truly comfortable here, are victims of the combined effects of a constitutional quirk and foreign policy.

Real anti-Semitism is concentrated among relatively few bigots and diehard Stalinists. One can see its ugly expression in two books by an execrable writer named Shevtsov who was permitted to publish by the armed services publication house.

Open anti-Semitism is unusual. Moscow's synagogue is not guarded yet no vandalism occurs.

All religions are disadvantaged but the Jewish religion most. There are only 63 Soviet synagogues and no seminary so rabbis aren't being replaced.

Difficulties are placed in the way of Jewish customs. However, I visited two active churches, a mosque and synagogue in Tbilisi, and found the synagogue best kept, spotless and unburned.

Older Jews, scarred by Stalin's persecution, worry lest this occur but few seem eager to emigrate to Israel.

When analyzing the position of Soviet Jews (who probably number close to three million) one must distinguish between their religious disabilities, affecting all faiths, and their political and social disabilities.

No country can be judged by its bigots and it is not only reasonable to measure Soviet views by Shevtsov. The trouble here is a built-in paradox.

It seems to be even harder to do if one must make the transition from behind-the-scenes operator to candidate, as was the case with Messrs. Salinger, Sorensen, O'Donnell and Welnsky.

Sorensen and O'Donnell have both stressed their past White House connections. Sorensen with a poster that said "John Kennedy Trusted Him." O'Donnell with a brochure that mentioned one or another of the Kennedy brothers six times.

Many voters, according to professional politicians, resent such attempts to win on someone else's name.

Finally, despite the widespread belief that there exists a Kennedy political machine—well-financed and ready to spring into action—few of the "Kennedy candidates" have been either well-organized or well-financed.

Sen. Kennedy and the widows of his two brothers have avoided any active role in the campaigns, and the family is not believed to have made substantial political contributions.

WASHINGTON.—Despite his fan-tasies as a party fund raiser, Sen. Spiro T. Agnew's local appeal for moderate Islamic officeholders is wearing as his recent trip to Cleveland has proved.

The members of the Ohio Republican delegation to the Cleveland Hotel for last week's a-plate dinner were Sen. W. Saxbe and he was there for one reason: Agnew's telephone, a personal invitation to attend the Vice-Presidential for the trip to Cleveland.

Not visitors three congressmen were invited to the dinner: Rep. William S. Steiger, Rep. William C. Cuyahoga County (Cleveland) three seat requests, pleading engagements. But their real aim was fear that Agnew's fact-finding mission would be a success.

A footnote whatever Midwestern congressmen think of him, Agnew is high in the South. In a private taken by Democratic Sen. James Buckley, Jr., Agnew is ahead of every single state officeholder, all of them Democrats.

The party negotiated agreement between Agnew, O'Brien, Democratic National Chairman, and Sargent Shriver to launch a political fund-raising drive starting Shriver's name came unasked at the last news.

During a session of negotiations punctuated by public outburst from O'Brien, Shriver reluctantly agreed that fund-raising operation (called Congressional Leadership for Future) would be under O'Brien control.

When the report drifted back, the Democratic National headquarters sided. O'Brien's emissary informed Shriver in hard-hat language: Unless make it perfectly clear that you're sailing under O'Brien's colors we will blow you out of the water. Sen. Saxbe contended that the press mistakes and that O'Brien aides help in press release announcing the formation.

Shriver followed this agreement with a press conference—up to a point, containing quotes from O'Brien, was not distributed at the press conference, but more suspicion among the O'Brien.

Although Shriver's support in Congress thought up the fund-raising scheme as a device to boost him for the 1972 presidential nomination, the idea so far has not exposed more Shriver political balve.

The Penn Central Affair

For instance, Shriver proposed that a new committee include Rep. James G. Thompson of Pennsylvania. When a party source pointed out that Galtbraith wants to purchase the most officeholders with insufficiently dovish views on Vietnam, Shriver was genuinely surprised.

More news came from Stennis, chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee. He informed the Penn that, while he would go along with the administration's plan to guarantee $300 million in bank loans to Penn Central under the Defense Production Act, he questions whether a railroad could be legitimately covered by the act.

With his lifetime anti-business bias, Patman had been expected to be troublesome. More surprising was the fact that Magnuson, after first making sympathy, decided against it.

When the report drifted back, the Democratic National headquarters sided. O'Brien's emissary informed Shriver in hard-hat language: Unless make it perfectly clear that you're sailing under O'Brien's colors we will blow you

The U.S. and its NATO allies have pressed the conference first to adopt the original British convention banning biological weapons only, before moving on to what they claim is the more complicated task of outlawing chemical arms.

Holland Festival: The World of Leos Janacek

By David Stevens
AMSTERDAM, June 30.—With "The Excursions of Mr. Broucek" and a dozen other significant but not necessarily well-known works, the Holland Festival, with its almost annual contingent of Czech visitors, is making another bid to increase general familiarity with the unique musical world of Leos Janacek.

Also typical is his choice of such apparently unimportant matters and the fierce social conscience that underlies it. Broucek, an anti-hero if there ever was one, is a self-satisfied petit bourgeois, materialistic, fawning, cowardly and boastful. From a tavern in Prague's upper town, Broucek takes off on two inebriated dream trips, one in space to the moon and the other in time to 15th-century Prague on the eve of a great battle in the Hussite war.

Beno Blacbut as Mr. Broucek (seated), and Dalibor Jedlicka, as Domsik in "The Excursions of Mr. Broucek."

Janacek's musical creation of the two dream worlds—the frivolous, operetta-like moon and the passionate patriotism of Hussite Prague—makes the work seem like two tenuously connected operas. They are held together by Broucek, whose character the composer saw as a distillation of some traits (less endearing than Schwick's) that he wanted to root out of his countrymen. There was a contemporary relevance when Janacek wrote the Hussite scenes, dominated World War I. The Brouceks of that day accommodated themselves a little too easily to the alien Habsburgs. This is no political work, in the usual sense, but the relevance remains.

One little touch is that Broucek's name means "Beetle," and the veteran tenor Beno Blacbut made this simile a visual one as he waddled around in dark suit, vest and bowler. His droll characterization was properly the centerpiece of the excellent production of the Prague National Theater. Oddly, for such a musical people, the Czechs are short on good voices, but this was more than offset by musical understanding and theatrical brilliance.

The large cast was well knit in Hannu Thien's stage direction. Oldrich Simacek's sets and Jan Skalicky's costumes moved from 19th-century Prague in space and time with hanging, fancifully designed circular panels and playing-card costumes for the moon people and suggestions of Gothic Prague for the Hussite scenes. Bohumil Gregor's cohesive and poetic musical leadership won the audience's cheers at the end. The presence of the Prague musicians made possible the scheduling of a number of works often excluded from concert programs because of stylistic difficulties, linguistic problems or unusual combinations of instruments.

One all-Janacek program in the small hall of the Concertgebouw had as its crowning points two works from the composer's immensely productive final decade. "The Diary of One Who Disappeared," the song cycle of a young peasant who leaves home for the love of a gypsy, was evocatively sung by the tenor Ivo Zilcik and the contralto Ivana Mixova, and his Nursery Rhymes, inspired by drawings in the children's pages of a newspaper, were tossed off with exhilarating precision by choristers from the national theater and a small woodwind ensemble—including an ocarina. These were preceded by earlier works, the Moravian folk songs, the piano sonata entitled "In the Mist," and the violin sonata, works less imposing but still highly individual.

The Art Market: Over $1 Million for a Seurat

LONDON, June 30 (AP).—French painter Georges Seurat's smaller version of "Les Poseuses" sold for $2,450,000 ($1,933,300) today. New York dealer Richard Feigen bought the masterpiece at an auction. Christie's auctioneers said it was the highest price ever paid for a work by the post-Impressionist. "Les Poseuses" (1877 May 13 and June 27) three poses by the same nude girl model in Seurat's Paris studio, was reputed to be the last of Seurat's major figure-subjects still in private hands. The picture is considered one of the most important works by any post-Impressionist artist. It was put up for sale by an American art collector and patron, Henry P. McElheny of Philadelphia.

Detail from "Les Poseuses" (smaller version) sold yesterday for over $1 million.

Mr. Feigen said that he does not know what the art-buying company, called Artemis and formed in recent weeks, intended to do with the picture. Also sold today was Claude Monet's superb landscape, "Les Bords de la Seine," for which an anonymous buyer paid $2,500,000 ($2,000,000). The painting, one of Monet's major works, shows people walking along a Seine path while small yachts sail past the island of Marante. The name of the vendor was not disclosed.

A Picasso self-portrait went for $1,470,000 ($1,352,800) to a buyer described only as a New York dealer. Picasso shows himself in the painting wearing an artist's white smock and an orange cravat. Picasso painted it in 1901 in Paris. Today's sale of 55 Impressionist and other modern works fetched a total of $1,611,933 ($3,268,944).

Spoletto Festival: Winners in All the Lively Arts

By William Weaver
SPOLETO, Italy, June 30.—This past weekend, a long one extended by the Italian national holidays honoring

Santa Peter and Paul, brought the now traditional capacity crowd of the Festival of Two Worlds, which continues until July 12. As usual, Gian Carlo Menotti and his general manager, Massimo Bogianckino, have arranged a program of varied popular Spoleto's visitors can visit an art show in the morning, go to a recital at noon, a film or some chamber ballet at five or six, and after a quick change and a bite, to an opera or a play or more ballet.

In each sector, the festival has chosen winners, every year the noon recitals seem to produce a new star. Shirley Veretz made her European debut at one of these mini-concerts several years ago; last year the Italians got to know the superb pianist Roberto Szidon; and this year it is the turn of soprano Jessye Norman, already familiar to German and Austrian audiences, and now, obviously, destined for international success. With her performance of the Wagner Wesendonck lieder and some Mahler songs, Miss Norman—not yet 25—evoked memories of Flagstad. In a few years' time, she should be a great Isolda, and she is already a memorable artist.

After the festival's opening production of Mercadante's "Il Giuramento," the other operatic evening combined a revival of last year's edition of Menotti's "The Medium" preceded by his little madrigal opera "The Unicorn, the Gorgon and the Manticore." A sma' chorus, from the Julliard American Opera Center, sang Menotti's madrigals with great charm, and the Julliard Orchestra gave a tasteful reading of the deft orchestral interludes. David Kran conducted skillfully, and John Butler's choreography brightly illustrated Menotti's text. Rouben Ter-Arutunian's simple, glittering set was magical. In "The Medium," Muriel Greenbaum repeated, and in fact, enriched her stunning interpretation of the title role, and Joanna Bruno—whose voice has become fuller but no less fresh—was again a lovely Monica. Menotti staged the work with his famous efficacy. Bruno Aprea conducted accurately, if a bit slowly.

Thirteen years ago, at the first Spoleto festival, Raymond Rouleau staged an unforgettable production of Daudet's "L'Arlesienne." This year he has brought his company in "Rashomon," Thierry Maulnier's adaptation of Fay and Michael Tsin's version of the Japanese story. Rouleau has made it a kind of ritual, played in a pure white world, with beautiful and enigmatic masks by Rotslav Doboujinsky and some fine acting by a fairly large company.

Later in the festival, ballet will be represented by the Merce Cunningham Company. In the meanwhile, Antonio Gades and his Spanish dancers are packing the Teatro Carlo Melliso with a program of intense flamenco. To complement the festival program, another Spoleto organization is sponsoring a series of organ recitals in the local churches. One of them, in the Basilica of Sant'Eufemia, featured Giuseppina Perotti in 17th and 18th-century works, played on an 18th-century positive organ. There is something for everyone in Spoleto, provided the festival-goer's energy holds out. The energy, the vitality of the festival itself are almost incredible.

Theater: The New 'Coco' Chanel

By Thomas Quinn Curtiss
PARIS, June 30.—Danielle Darrieux, the piquant, Titian-blond star of the French cinema, who is replacing Katharine Hepburn in "Coco" films in New York Thursday to begin rehearsals. She will take over the part of Chanel in the Lerner-Frey musical on Aug. 3, her contract committing her to the role until July, 1971.

Danielle Darrieux... off to Broadway.

"This will be my debut on Broadway," explained Miss Darrieux, chirping merrily in her agent's office this afternoon. She perched on the arm of a leather conference armchair, replying quick wittily to a barrage of questions in French and English. She has changed very little. Her beauty has matured a bit but her figure is as lithe as ever. In recent years, Miss Darrieux has been alternating between the stage and the screen. "24 Hours in a Woman's Life" after the Stefan Zweig novelette with a Monte Carlo setting, and "The Birds Go to Die in Peru," written and directed by Romain Gary, are among her latest films. In the theater, she has appeared in "The Mauve Dress of Valentine," by Francoise Sagan, and this season, in Marcel Achard's "Domino," a great success. "I'm very thrilled, very flattered and very frightened," she said. "Being frightened is a good omen. It always spurs one on. There is no terror in film-making for a scene may be reshot, but I suffer pangs of agony before every performance in the theater, usually twice. When the curtain goes up, you feel you are doomed. Nothing will stop the progress of the play once it starts. Then comes the second wave of shivers just before I make my entrance. "I don't know New York very well. I have only made brief stays there—and always during heat waves. I remember arriving in the summer of 1937 en route for Hollywood. It was oven-like and I gasped for breath. A few weeks ago I went over just for a night to see 'Coco.' It was hotter than ever, but everything but the streets have been air-conditioned. Just being in a theater is a pleasure," she continued. "I loved 'Coco.' There is a French touch to its music and what a wonderful part! Katharine Hepburn is magnificent. No, I'm not going to imitate her. How could I with my French accent? She doesn't sing, you know, but gives a dramatic recital of the words of the musical numbers. I do sing and I shall sing the songs, but I shall try to catch something of the Hepburn majesty in acting. Miss Darrieux, symbol of Parisian chic, was born in Bordeaux and is an accomplished musician. She was a pupil at the Paris Conservatoire, where she studied the violin and voice. She was engaged for her first film when she was 14 and sang in her initial movie, "Le Bal." Since, she has sung in only one of her films, a Hollywood production, "The Young and the Rubidiv." Last year, to remind the public of her neglected talent, she performed at Le Tete de l'Art, an elegant cabaret on the Avenue de l'Opera, singing her songs very prettily.

U.S. Official Sees Rise In Second-Quarter GNP

By Eoin Belton
WASHINGTON, June 30 (Reuters).—The U.S. gross national product (GNP) reversed two successive declines to score a fractional advance in the second 1970 quarter ending today, Commerce Department assistant secretary Harold Passer said today.

If the estimates are borne out, officials say, the economy may be on the way to shrugging off its recessionary doldrums.

After dipping 0.4 percent in the fourth 1969 quarter and three percent in the first 1970 quarter, the real GNP swung up by an estimated 0.1 or 0.2 percent in the current quarter, he said in an interview.

Price Slowdown
Mr. Passer, who supervises compilation of the GNP figures, attributed the turnaround mainly to a marked slowdown in the overall price index—of GNP deflator.

Mr. Passer said that this index (which will be announced with the GNP figures in about two weeks) advanced at an annual rate of about 4.5 percent in the second quarter, down from the 6.25 percent rate of climb in the first quarter.

Mr. Passer confessed he had some reservations about the timeliness of achieving the officially forecast 3.4 percent annual rate GNP deflator by end-1970, but now fully endorsed the possibility of this relatively subdued rate of inflation.

Mr. Passer said a second important factor in the swing in the real value of the national output of goods and services was the pick-up in retail sales and general consumer spending toward the end of the current quarter.

He forecast the actual GNP would advance to $890 billion in money terms by the end of 1970 compared with $852 billion at the end of 1969. This agrees with revised forecasts of the Council of Economic Advisors and represents a real growth of 0.5 to 1 percent.

Mr. Passer also assessed that federal and state expenditure increased in the second quarter to an extent at least offsetting the impact on the public sector of defense cut-backs. He said the main weight of government concern now is to protect against too rapid a pick-up in the second half of the year.

Factory Orders Rise

WASHINGTON, June 30 (Reuters).—Boisterous expectations of an economic upturn was the announcement today that new factory orders rose 2.6 percent or $1.4 billion in May to a seasonally adjusted $54.8 billion after a revised decline of 0.9 percent in April.

This was the first upturn since

Sir Eric Meets Shareholders IOS Says It Believes the Worst Is Over

By Philip Greer
TORONTO, June 30 (WP).—Mutual funds managed by strife-torn IOS Ltd. suffered net redemptions of $88 million in May as sales tumbled to $116.8 million against $271.8 million in the same month of 1969, the company's new chairman confirmed today.

In June, Sir Eric Wyndham White told the annual shareholders' meeting IOS expects net redemptions of about $48 million and sales of about $130 million.

"We believe the bottom has been reached," he told more than 400 shareholders jammed into a stuffy room at the Royal York Hotel here. "The foundations of the company continue to be as strong today as they were at its inception."

Sir Eric, the former director general of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade who took over control of IOS in mid-May, also revealed that by May 31 the company's sales force had fallen to 10,776, down from more than 15,000 at the end of 1969. "The

Penn Central Bankruptcy Need Questioned

WASHINGTON, June 30.—Rep. Brock Adams, D. Wash., has asked just why the Penn Central railroad went into bankruptcy when a wholly-owned subsidiary, Pennsylvania Co., had $846 million in retained earnings.

The funds "would have gone a long way" toward keeping the carrier solvent, Rep. Adams said during continuing hearings yesterday before the House Commerce Committee on a bill to provide $750 million in government-guaranteed loans to rescue ailing railroads.

The hearings were recessed today until further notice.

House investigators said today they had found some evidence that large sales of Penn Central stock were made before the company went bankrupt "on the basis of insider information obtained by some officers and directors of the Penn Central."

A spokesman said investigations were under way to discover whether there were any illegal financial manipulations involved.

The report disclosed that as of April 1970, 11 of the conglomerate's 14 directors also sat on the boards of 12 U.S. commercial banks.

The largest single Penn Central stockholder as of Dec. 31, 1969, the report said, was Morgan Guaranty Trust with $49,276 shares, representing 2.4 percent of total shares outstanding. Morgan, it added, also had two directors on Penn Central's board at that time.

As of Dec. 31, 1969, the report said, First National City Bank of New York held by far the most Penn Central debt—$386.61 million.

Despite mounting apprehension that other roads may be hearing similar trouble, it has become clear that the legislation faces long scrutiny—perhaps two months—before clearing the committee.

Several members wondered if the Penn railroad operation had not deteriorated as the result of diverting revenues toward acquisition of diversified interests such as real estate and pipelines.

"You know they drained off money for purposes that had nothing to do with railroading," Mr. Staggers told the ICC witnesses.

On another front, Penn Central's problems mounted as the Supreme Court raised the price it must pay for properties of the bankrupt New Haven railroad by $28 million to $176 million.

The 4-to-2 decision upheld the figure fixed by a reorganization court, a figure subsequently knocked down to $150 million by a New York federal district court.

In dissent, Justice Hugo L. Black wrote that the $28 million added burden "can only bring about a further deterioration of the Penn Central's already seriously compromised financial position and will further reduce the ultimate chances of success of this venture in which the public has a considerable stake."

Steel Firm Is Sued, Settles on Reciprocity

WASHINGTON, June 30 (NYT).—In the third such case against a major steel company in a year, the Justice Department brought suit today against Republic Steel Corp. for engaging in allegedly illegal reciprocal business arrangements.

Republic, like U.S. Steel Corp. and Inland Steel Co. before it, agreed to a settlement of the suit.

The settlement would bar Republic, for a period of ten years, from making any agreements similar to those challenged by the suit, i.e. making its purchases from any supplier conditional upon the supplier's buying from Republic Steel.

The agreement also prohibits Republic "from discussing with any supplier or contractor the relationship of purchases and sales between them or from comparing statistical data to further such a relationship," the department said.

"The firm is further prohibited from maintaining statistical compilations that compare sales to and purchases from suppliers," it added.

The agreement also prohibits Republic from "re-establishing its former business development division and from establishing any other office to promote trade relations involving reciprocal purchasing agreements."

Justice said Republic had engaged in reciprocal arrangements since at least 1963.

Algeria Demands Healthy Rate Cut From French Firms Owning Pipeline

ALGERIERS, June 30 (AP).—The Algerian government decried today that it has ordered the French owners of a 485-mile oil pipeline from In Amenas to the Tunisian port of La Skirra to cut rates sharply or face unspecified government action.

A government statement accused French oil companies of artificially inflating rates on their "Trapsah" pipeline to raise costs on their own oil and thereby cut Algerian government revenue.

Algeria has demanded that the rate should be cut to 11 dinars ($2.20) a ton from the current 15 dinars ($3) retroactively to Jan. 1, 1969, when the rates were 19 dinars. This would represent a cut of more than $10 million in pipeline payments this year, plus refunds of some $20 million for "excessive" charges in 1969.

Trapsah moves some 13.5 million tons of oil out of the Sahara every year—almost one-third of Algeria's total production.

More than 60 percent of Algerian oil production is still under French control, but the government has ordered the French oil companies to pay more than 70 percent of their turnover into Algerian accounts pending settlement of a drawdown dispute over oil prices.

Japan Has May Payments Deficit

TOKYO, June 30 (AP).—Japan had a balance-of-payments deficit of $78 million in May, compared with a surplus of $53 million in April, the Finance Ministry said today.

It was only the third monthly payments deficit the country has shown since April, 1968. The others were in January, 1969, and January, 1970.

The Finance Ministry attributed the deficit to a large net outflow of foreign portfolio investment capital and to a deterioration in Japan's merchandise trade surplus for which it blamed seasonal factors.

IBM Unveils New 370 Line Of Computers

NEW YORK, June 30.—International Business Machines announced today the development of a successor to its 360 line—a new medium and large-scale computer system which it said is faster and has a higher storage capacity than previous models.

The giant of the world's computer industry said:

"We are confident that the performance of the system-370, its compatibility, its engineering and its programming which would make it the stand-out for the '70s that system-360, which currently accounts for a substantial part of the IBM computer market, was in the '60s."

IBM said the new system will come in two models, the 155 and 168. Both are currently in production and are expected to be available early next year.

IBM said both models operate between four and five times faster internally than the old model.

"The requirement of the '70s will make new demands on computer users," said F. G. Rodgers, president of the company's data processing division. "To do the job, banks, manufacturing firms and insurance companies—as well as government agencies and many scientific users—need faster, more efficient computers and larger capacity data storage. System-370 meets these requirements."

Monthly rental for a typical 155 model would be $41,988, and it would sell for $2.2 million. For the 168, rental would be $98,715 and the sale $4.6 million.

In simultaneous announcements in London and Paris today, IBM stressed the "multinational" effort involved in the development of the 370. The 155 is already being produced in France, the firm said, with parts being produced in Britain, West Germany and Sweden.

The new models can use all existing IBM peripheral devices as well as a new 2,000-line-a-minute printer and a 800 million character capacity disc storage, IBM said.

In Minneapolis, Minn., Honeywell Inc. said IBM's announcement "has been anticipated for several months and contains no surprises."

Hill Samuel Sets Merger in U.K.

LONDON, June 30 (UPI).—Hill Samuel, one of Britain's big merchant banks, said today it is to link up with the country's second largest real estate firm—Metropolitan Estates and Property Corp.

The merged unit would have a market value of $200 million ($480 million) and would control assets worth many more millions.

Sir Kenneth Keith, who runs Hill Samuel, will head the new group as executive chairman.

NYSE Sends Revised Plan For Rate Structure to SEC

NEW YORK, June 30 (NYT).—The New York Stock Exchange has also submitted plans for further volume discounts on commission rates and would restrict the rate increases on most small transactions to 50 percent under a plan submitted to the Securities and Exchange Commission today.

The proposed new rate structure represents a substantial departure, both in philosophy and scope, from the rate package presented to the SEC for study last February. That had called for rate boosts of more than 100 percent on some small trades as well as volume discounts on most transactions above 300 shares in size.

E. John Cunningham, executive NYSE vice-president, also confirmed that rate increases probably would be requested on almost all transactions up to and including 1,000 shares.

He said the Exchange had decided to define the small investor as an individual who does not buy or sell more than $5,000 worth of stock at a time. Such an individual would not have to pay rate increases of more than 50 percent.

Mr. Cunningham said the Exchange would repeat its request for a 90-day extension of the $15 commission surcharge that expires Monday.

It had been approved by the SEC to give Wall Street rate relief on an interim basis because of the severe operating losses being recorded by many brokerage houses.

In general, however, the smallest rate boosts under the new plan would be applied to transactions of 1,000 shares, with the increases becoming larger as the size of the trade diminishes, until the 50 percent maximum increase is reached.

Italian Reserves Show Gain in May Of $445 Million

ROME, June 30 (Reuters).—Italy's net official reserves rose by 278.2 billion lire ($445 million) in May to 2,730.2 billion ($437 billion) from 2,452 billion in April, the Bank of Italy said today.

The chief factor in the month was a $72.4 billion fall in short-term indebtedness, mainly swaps with the Federal Reserve Bank of New York, to $11.9 billion from $84.3 billion in April.

Financial sources noted that over $400 million entered Italy in May through the state-owned Ente Nazionale per l'Energia Elettrica bond issue plus private placement and this factor probably permitted the reduction in short-term debts.

Prices Close Mixed to Lower After Morning Gains in N.Y.

By Vartan G. Vartan
NEW YORK, June 30 (NYT).—The stock market closed out the June quarter today with mixed-to-lower readings in the popular New York Stock Exchange indicators. There was a pronounced weakness in IBM, Wall Street's most famous growth stock.

IBM fell 1/2 to 250 as a big loser in the computer group. Its action, which some analysts described as "rather surprising," followed the introduction of a long-awaited new computer system. The shares traded early this year at a record price of 287.

The Dow Jones industrial average, slipping steadily during the session after being ahead nearly 4 points in the opening hour, closed at 683.53 with a razor-edge gain of 0.62. The NYSE index, tracing a similar downward pattern for all listed issues, dipped 0.10 to 39.58. Standard & Poor's 500 lost 0.17 at 72.72.

Caution continued high in the investment community, while volume continued low. The turnover of $28 million shares ran well below the 1970 average of 10.8 million shares.

Penn Central, the company responsible for much of the market's current cautious attitude, backtracked 1/2 to 6 3/4 as the most active issue after equating last week's low of 8 1/2.

Stock prices generally have moved along a downward slide since June 21, when the Penn Central's railroad subsidiary filed for reorganization under the bankruptcy laws. Several railroad-oriented averages have now dropped to 12-year lows mainly as a result of this.

But some posted gains today after suffering steep drops yesterday. Norfolk & Western rose 1 1/4 to 56 1/2 after its drop of 4 7/8. Louisville & Nashville added 1/4 to 51, following its decline yesterday of 4 points.

Two computer equipment stocks were casualties on the active roster. Electronic Memories and Magnetics, the second most heavily traded issue, fell 1 1/4 to 8 1/2. After the market close yesterday, the company forecast a decline in its second-quarter profits. Memory dropped 2 3/8 to 62 1/8. The stock is down from its 1970 high of 166 3/4.

One broker declared there were "absolutely no surprises" in President Nixon's report today on military operations in Cambodia.

The Dow indicator has been locked in a trading range between approximately 680 and 720 since the end of May. "I suspect that we will continue to have a dull summer," said one Wall Street analyst.

Among the blue chips, American Telephone rose 3/8 to 41 1/4 and General Motors added 3/8 to 62 1/8. Chrysler dipped 1/8 to 18. The nation's third largest automaker is tagged as "still a high-risk situation" by Standard & Poor's outlook.

STOCKHOLM, June 30—European pairs dominated the standings after the first day of play in the world pair championship here yesterday. With 48 deals completed of a scheduled 288, the leaders were: Arne Persson and Einar Pyk of Stockholm, 4,568; Niels Henriksen and Peter Lund of Aarhus, Denmark, 4,450; Giuseppe Savino and Mario Zanasi of La Spezia, Italy, 4,391; Jean Besse and John Collings of Geneva, 4,287.

The talking point of the tournament was the victory of 74-year-old New York expert Waldemar von Zedwitz, and Barbara Brier of Miami, Fla., in the mixed pairs event here Sunday.

A different opening lead on the diagramed deal could have changed the result of the tournament. The winners held the North-South cards against Risi Markus of London, and George Cabellet of Lausanne, Switzerland, who led for most of the tournament and finally finished second.

Von Zedwitz held the North hand, and adopted an expert sequence when his partner responded one heart to one club. He reversed with two diamonds, showed his heart support on the third round, and gave up when his partner insisted on no trump.

As the bidding made it clear that South was fully prepared for a spade lead, West might well have considered leading a diamond. Dummy's second suit is often the weak point for the declaring side, and a diamond lead would have left South struggling to make nine tricks. She would have had to guess the location of the club queen to make the contract, and would have had no chance to make overtricks.

West actually led the spade four, which was a popular choice at other tables. When her partner took the spade ace and returned the jack, South played skillfully to make 11 tricks. She took the spade king and played the six of clubs to dummy's nine. When this won, she could safely return to the club king, cash the spade queen, and take winners in the dummy. East made his heart queen at the finish, but the two overtricks gave North-South 152 match points out of a possible 222.

THE LOVE THAT DARED NOT SPEAK ITS NAME

A Candid History of Homosexuality in Britain. By H. Montgomery Hyde. Little, Brown. 323 pp. $8.95.

Reviewed by Richard Freedman

CONSIDERING the disproportionate contribution homosexuals have made to our founding civilization—Socrates, Da Vinci, Michelangelo, Shakespeare (probably), Frost, Tchaikovsky, to name but a few—and the invaluable role even the less talented ones play in stemming the Population Explosion, one would think a grateful society would give them medals rather than hound them with blackmail, disgrace and jail, and often drive them to suicide.

But society doesn't operate rationally, as this woe-filled history of British homosexuality repeatedly demonstrates. From the savage laws enacted under Henry VIII until the enlightened Wolfenden Act passed three years ago by Parliament, legalizing private homosexual acts between consenting adults, sodomites in what is otherwise the most civilized nation in the world have been persecuted with a viciousness one can only attribute to the sexual insecurities of the "straight" majority.

As a member of the House of Commons in the 1950s, when the Wolfenden Report was first being aired, H. Montgomery Hyde is in an admirable position to discuss the legal aspects of homosexuality, which he does here with clarity, restraint and humanity. Despite its title, derived from a rather maukish poem by Lord Alfred Douglas—Oscar Wilde's paramour—and quoted against Wilde at his infamous trial, this is a very sober and unsensational account.

CROSSWORD

By Will Weng

Until then, of course, the great thing was not to get caught, because regardless of draconian laws, homosexuality has always pervaded all strata of society. From Kings Edward II and James I, the daisy chain has extended to numerous queer peers (of one such, Sir Winston Churchill blandly remarked that he was the kind of MP who "gave pederasty a bad name"), and down to the faute-de-mieux faggoty of the navy, the public schools, and the prisons.

Newcombe Wins; Rain Halts Play
Rosewall Gains Semis

By Fred Tupper

WIMBLEDON, England, June 30 (UPI)—Ken Rosewall beat Tony Roche in four enthralling sets today, John Newcombe came out of the abyss to beat Roy Emerson in five, and if anything is sure in tennis, Rosewall will face Roger Taylor and Newcombe will meet Andre Gimeno in the semifinals on Thursday.

For Taylor was leading Clark Graebner 6-3, 11-9, 8-7 and Gimeno was ahead of Bob "Nuts" Carmichael 6-1, 6-2, 1-3 when a cold misting rain and light stopped play here at dusk. They resume tomorrow.

NHL Awards Oakland Seals To Baseball Owner Finley

By Gerald Eskenazi

NEW YORK, June 30 (UPI)—The National Hockey League yesterday awarded the Oakland Seals to Charles O. Finley, the controversial owner of the Oakland Athletics baseball team.

Finley won out over Jerry Seltzer, the roller derby king who had worried about his image. Seltzer, in fact, cut his long hair and wore a conservative black suit for his meeting with the NHL's board of governors at the International Hotel at Kennedy Airport.

But the league made its decision on one major factor: that Finley was putting up his own money and would be, in effect, a one-man operation. Finley, who came armed with 17 letters of recommendation from baseball owners and officials, also promised to move to Oakland.

Lyon of Sweden In Roosevelt Trot

WESTBURY, L.I., June 30 (UPI)—Lyon, a 6-year-old bay foal from Sweden, was the first horse chosen yesterday for the $125,000 Roosevelt International, the world's richest invitation trot.

The 1 1/4-mile race to be started at Roosevelt Raceway on July 18, has only one automatic starter—Une de Mai of France, who captured the race last year.

In ten starts this season, Lyon has won five times and finished second four times. He has been handled by Ollie Elfstrand, a 39-year-old trainer-driver. Most of the boy's starts had been in 1 1/8 mile contests without a starting gate. This year Elfstrand drove Lyon in a mile race, behind a gate, and the horse turned in Sweden's fastest mile of the year—2:02 2/5.

RED SMITH Uneasy the Head

THE Kansas City Chiefs, who were the best football team in the world last winter and also the second-best in their division, have a golden opportunity to hit bottom at the start of the 1970 season.

At three-all in the first set, Ken unaccountably got the shakes, doublefaulting three times to lose it, and two games later Roche had a set point. Rosewall stayed off and then played a ninth game that will be remembered. On successive points, he hit a forehand pass, forced Tony to volley long, rolled a forehand across court and then drilled an acutely angled backhand across court again for the break back. It was pure elixir. No man could have played a game better.

Roche can do almost anything with a tennis ball, but the shafts of lightning that he hurled at him left him stranded. Rosewall was at set point now, and the backhand that took it was touchable but not returnable. In this lyrical mood, Ken had five games running in the second set against one of the two or three best tennis players in the world. When Ken doublefaulted twice in the third set, Roche won, 6-4.

Could Rosewall play the course? Had that magical touch gone? At two-all in the fourth, another dream game was conjured up. He looked like the end of the trail for the trail figure inconspicuously called "Mud-dog."

Finley had powerful friends—on the board of governors and in the East—who paved the way for his selection. One of them pointed to Seltzer before the meeting and said: "Nuts, I thought he'd wear his usual loud outfit. That's a point for him."

Seltzer, who was brought in by TNC, had indicated he would resign Bill Creasy as the Seals president if he got the franchise. It is likely there will be a major front-office change with Finley in charge. Frank Selke Jr., the general manager, and other key personnel will be moving out. Bill Torrey, the club's executive vice president, aligned himself with the Finley group, as did the coach, Fred Glover.

Several of the club owners watched, smiling, as Clarence Campbell, the league president, introduced Finley at a news conference. "I've been called flamboyant," said the 52-year-old Finley, who made much of his fortune by selling insurance to doctors. "But I prefer to think of myself as colorful. We'll have some changes. Maybe some between-periods entertainment, too. But we've got to have a good team. You can't buy a good team."

Wimbledon Sums

John Newcombe, Australia, d. Roy Emerson, Australia, 6-1, 5-7, 3-6, 6-2, 11-9; Ken Rosewall, Australia, d. Tony Roche, Australia, 10-8, 6-2, 6-4.

Helen Gourlay, Australia, and Pat Walkden, South Africa, d. Mrs. Margaret Court, Australia, by default. Francoise Durr, France, Virginia Wade, Britain, and Mrs. Nell Tremas, Britain, 6-2, 2-6, 6-1.

John Beaks, the coach at Nyack High School, visited the first camp as a spectator, got involved and pitched in as a volunteer because he loved working with the kids. He was back the next summer, and when that camp closed he said he'd like to go out and watch the Chiefs training. Stram made him welcome.

ming forward, a job that jumped off the line and another backhand threaded the needle to give him the break he wanted. The rest was a formality. He broke Tony again and ran out the match, 10-8, 6-1, 6-4, 6-2, to Rosennahs.

Across the way in the swirling wind and dust on number one court was the struggle between Newcombe and Emerson. It was all fierce striking. Back and forth the issue waved, with Emerson leading two sets to one. They key to the match hung on the first game in the fourth set. Seven times it went to deuce, five times Emmo had advantage. In between, his shorts fell down and had to be pinned up by a line judge. It relieved the tension, but Newcombe held service to win the game.

In the furious fifth set, Emerson had five break points. One after another drifted away, the last two in the 15th game as he hit a high volley out and was beaten by a lunging Newcombe volley. In the end, Roy hit a careless shot. With the court at his mercy, he missed the volley. Match point coming up, Newcombe ran around to take the second service line, forehand and backhand, and he hit the line for the victory, 6-1, 5-7, 3-6, 6-2, 11-9.

Taylor's incredible triumph over Laver had brought a mob to the gates of center court. Roger was ready. He was never in the slightest danger until near the end. As Taylor found that he could block Graebner's thundering service and sink it back. He found that Graebner's touch on the volley was erratic and mostly short, giving him time to spin the ball into open territory across court. At three-all in the first set, he rolled a backhand to one side and a forehand to the other side, broke and had the set at 6-3 when Clark doublefaulted twice.

Roger threatened to run away with the match. He was at 0-40 for the second game of the second set; he had four break points again in the fourth game. But Graebner hung on. Long later, the New Yorker had a miserable game. He let a ball go that landed inside the line, muffed a smash, volleyed long and bobbled an easy volley into the net. Second set to Taylor, at 11-9.

Graebner mesmerized Taylor's swinging southpaw service. The only time he could have had a break point was when a wild Taylor smash hit him. Roger was ahead 3-1 in the third, then Graebner got to 0-40 for the break back and lost it. Taylor was serving for the match at 5-3. Bravely, the New Yorker took the game as Roger volleyed into the alley, president, aligned himself with the Finley group, as did the coach, Fred Glover.

But the Mets, who had also scored in the fifth, opened their ninth with three straight singles, tying the score and knocking out starter Steve Blass. They eventually scored the winning run on Donn Clendenon's fly to right with the bases full and one out.

McCovey Regains Lead Over Allen In Balloting for All-Star Position

NEW YORK, June 30 (UPI)—Willie McCovey, the San Francisco slugger, has regained the lead over Richie Allen of St. Louis in the voting for first baseman on the National League All-Star team.

The latest weekly figures, released yesterday by Commissioner Bowie Kuhn, gave McCovey a margin of 14,859 over Allen, with a total of 1,099,627 votes counted.

The final official starting lineups for both teams for the July 14 game in Cincinnati will be announced next week, and the pitchers and other squad members will be named later by the managers.

Liston Stops the Bayonne Bleeder

By Dave Anderson

JERSEY CITY, June 30 (UPI)—In a bloody sacrifice that evoked more sympathy for the loser than prestige for the winner, Sonny Liston was awarded a 10th-round knockout at the Jersey City Armory last night when Chuck Wepner was determined unfit to continue after nine rounds.

To most of the 4,012 spectators, including Cassius Clay, the heavyweight bout should have been stopped much earlier. Wepner, known as the Bayonne Bleeder because of his tendency to cut easily around the eyes, began to bleed from the nose in the second round as the former champion jabbed him continually with his left hand. In the next round, Wepner was bleeding above both eyebrows.

Twice it appeared to ringside observers that the State Athletic Commission physician, Dr. Reginald Farrar, was about to examine Wepner between rounds—after the third and after the sixth. But he appeared to be restrained by Abe Green, the New Jersey boxing commissioner.

Wepner, bleeding and swollen around both eyes, didn't protest much, but his trainer, Al Braverman, snarled at the physician. "Don't you dare stop it," Braverman yelled. "What the hell's the matter with you? One round, that's all, one round."

Felix had awarded Liston six of the nine rounds. The awarded referee, the only official, scored the fifth and sixth rounds for Wepner, with the third even. Felix had motioned Dr. Farrar into the ring as early as the end of the third round, with no reaction.

Wepner made a plea to stop the other day not to stop the fight because of superficial cuts," explained Greene. "Early in the fight, the cuts appeared superficial."

Mets Defeat Pirates on 2-Run 9th and Remain in First

By Leonard Koppett

NEW YORK, June 30 (UPI)—Making as much drama as they could out of the battle for first place for $2,416 Shea Stadium spectators, who included their one-millionth customer, the New York Mets scored two runs in the ninth inning last night for a 3-2 decision over Pittsburgh.

Tom Seaver, pitching his 12th victory, held the Pirates hitless in seven of the nine innings, but yielded a run on two hits in the fifth and another on three singles in the top of the ninth.

4 1/2-Month Suspension Ends
McLain's Season To Begin Tonight

LAKELAND, Fla., June 30 (UPI)—Denny McLain's baseball season begins tomorrow, 4 1/2-months after he was expelled from the sport.

McLain, the hard-throwing right-hander who in the early 20-games of the last three decades, was scheduled to be on the mound for the Detroit Tigers tomorrow against the New York Yankees before a sellout crowd in Tiger Stadium.

It will be his first appearance in a Detroit uniform since his official suspension Feb. 19 by baseball commissioner Bowie Kuhn for alleged connections with bookmakers.

"I'm getting real excited about it," McLain said, following a workout on a bench in sweat clothes and waiting to get into a pick-up basketball game, the 36-year-old McLain was relaxed and smiling.

"How long has it been since you've seen me smile like this?" He asked his workout coach, Jim Hendler, the Lakeland coach. "I think probably aged a lot at first following the suspension but I think I've got it back now. I'm physically ready and the big question now is: am I mentally ready?"

"I've never been real nervous heading into a game. A better word is very anxious quite possibly over-anxious. But after I throw that first ball all that will be past and I'll be pitching baseball."

McLain will suit up at about 200 pounds, some six pounds under his normal playing weight. He said he is going to Detroit with the idea of pitching every fourth day, rain or shine. "I don't believe they pay me to start every fifth day."

The Immense Mess

By Russell Baker

WASHINGTON.—There was an immense mess. It was spreading over the United States at a rate that titillated science. From time to time the television networks showed special news films of the immense mess advancing through Chicago or Boston. It was depressing to watch.

We did not want there to be an immense mess. It was inconvenient. There was so much to think about. Baseball. Taxes. Little messes. Or something. There must have been something else to think about. In any case, what difference does it make? We did not want there to be an immense mess.

One night while watching television, our favorite program was interrupted by Walter Cronkite. He was at Immense Mess Control. In Texas, naturally. He intended to tell us about the government's efforts to reduce the immense mess by lifting several experimental tons of it to the moon.

Granny said there wasn't any immense mess at all, and if there was it would go away if the newspapers would only quit writing about it. Granny said she didn't know what she was talking about, so Granny said, "Well, let's phone up Vice-President Agnew."

There certainly wouldn't be any mess worth speaking of, Gramps. Agnew said, "If it were not for the television always standing around with its cameras waiting, inviting messes to spread right up to the red eye."

"Glory be," cried Granny. "There's a man who tells a woman what she wants to hear." Gramps, however, wanted to hear from President Nixon. He phoned.

"My friend," said the president, "I have heard it said, even by persons who love America—and there are many of those even outside the Justice Department, let us never forget that for one moment—I have heard it said that there is an immense mess, and I intend to get the facts, because the president is the only man, of course, who can possibly have access to all the facts, and therefore I shall appoint blue ribbon presidential commission to investigate, first, whether a mess in fact exists, second, whether it is an immense mess as alleged and third, whether, if it is an immense mess, it is spreading, and finally, and let me make this much perfectly clear, even if there is an immense mess and even if it is spreading, as alleged, there is still my friend, a great deal that is right about America."

Uncle Pete told dad there was an immense mess all right and most of it was located in the White House. Dad became angry and said that any mess the president might eventually decide there was resulted because people like Uncle Pete let their hair grow.

Uncle Pete said he was going to get some dynamite and blow up the house, since there was no possibility of communicating with dad in any other fashion. Cousin Marjorie, 13, said she hated all of us because all we could do was hate.

The Decline Of the Cowboy

By B. Drummond Ayres Jr.

CIMARRON, N. M., (NYT)—Jiggs Porter refuses to live on daylight saving time. His watch is always an hour behind and if he had his way, that hour would be years.

The past treated him better than the present. The future holds no great promise. Mr. Porter is the bonafide, 54-year-old foreman of the CS Ranch, one of the largest and most profitable spreads in the country but one whose mode of operation—and possibly its success—are threatened by a development it cannot control.

Like ranches everywhere, the CS is running out of cowboys. "The old men are dying off," says Mr. Porter, "and the young men prefer city life or the rodeos."

Two decades ago, when Mr. Porter came out hand after 15 years of punching cattle and training horses all over this part of north-central New Mexico, there were 25 cowboys riding herd on the 8,000 Herefords that graze on 300,000 acres of plains, foothills and mountains.

The other morning at daybreak as the tabletop mess on the eastern horizon began to glow like hot coals and the cottonwood in the chilly bottoms emerged a smoky purple, only five men swung up into the saddle.

Two of them were drawing Social Security. The others were Spanish-Americans, the last of a vanishing breed of ranch labor.

All sat as easily on their jostling quarter-horses—horses bred for high speed over short distances, about one-quarter of a mile—as some men sit in a favorite old chair.

Mr. Porter had set the morning aside for the inoculating, dehorning, ear-marking, castrating and branding of 250 calves—dusty, bloody work for about 20 men.

Before Sunrise

Long before sunrise, Mr. Porter routed out his crew, which again included most of the Davis family and several neighbors. The cooks in the big adobe ranch house weighed down the long dining table with enamelware pots of scalding black coffee and big china platters piled high with thick-sliced bacon, fried eggs and stacks of yellow pancakes.

At an hour before daybreak, the crew mounted up and headed out onto the ranch. It was so dark a man could work only by instinct.

Then, suddenly, a fire-engine-red sun burst over the horizon, revealing a three-mile-long string of cattle and outriders, all headed toward cool summer pastures in the mountainside valley.

Dust spiraled higher than the clouds. Calves bawled for their mothers. Cow-punchers yelped and slapped their chaps with coiled lariats.

For just a moment, it seemed the whole world was on Jiggs Porter's time.

Eight-year-old Kim scurried from calf to calf sprinkling cougulant powder on the coating wounds left by the dehorning tool. Mrs. Davis wielded an inoculating syringe. Mr. Davis had an ear-marking knife. And so it went for five hard hours.

"What with the cowpoke shortage, ranching is now a family affair no matter what size operation you run. Many of us purposely have lots of children and we encourage our hired hands to do the same," Mr. Davis said.

"We replace men with machines whenever possible, but no one has yet come up with a machine that can rope or dehorn or cut calves away from cows."

The decline of the cowboy probably began when some city dude turned on the bright lights.

PEOPLE: Chinese Check

Many years back—we don't recall exactly when, but it must have been quite a while because we were still reading the Reader's Digest—that worthy publication printed a purportedly true story about a citizen of China who had checked his suitcase at Grand Central Station.

After finishing his New Year's shopping or bamboo shoot or whatever it is that the Chinese do in New York we haven't returned to the terminal to retrieve his suitcase only to be told that there was no record of his ever having checked in the object. The Chinese man exploded in rage, unleashing a torrent of abuse that has somehow all ways stuck in our mind: "Where my bag go? She no fly! You no more fit run station than Godake! That's all I hope!"

All by way of introducing this week's epidemic of fractured English as authentically and much-misunderstood but undeniably well-traveled readers:

F.J. James, of Geneva, for example who also once did business with the "Hing On Ivory Company" in Hong Kong, was particularly delighted with a sign in the elevator of my hotel in Kyoto, Japan, which read: "Keep hands off buttons which no business you!"

Mr. D.D. who represents the U.S. Travel Service in France and requests anonymity in the interest of purer relations, writes of an excellent hotel in Rio de Janeiro which enlisted the aid of its guests in keeping things neat and—to that end—posted the following request: "Please avoid the furniture to damage the walls."

John Bovey, counselor of the U.S. Embassy in The Hague, remembers "the dear dead days, not quite beyond recall, when the Japanese were imitating, instead of leaping ahead of, the rest of the world. At that time they marketed a scotch-type whiskey which was put up in a familiar squat, black bottle on the English model.

It pressed to award this week's gold-star-on-the-forehead, though we'd have to credit it to Shiva, of Farnley-Voltaire. France, who remembers that "in Ceylon in the spacious old days it was customary for the barber to visit one's home to cut the children's hair, an effective way of insuring peace if not quiet. As progress eroded this custom, one enterprising shop in Colombo placed the following announcement on its sign board: 'If you want a crop of children, take our barber home.'"
